His timing today was fine, more resonant. Also:
1. He did say it, in Report;
2. He extraordinarily recorded objection to Barr's "summary," via letter to Barr; and
3. He showed discipline & credibiity by waiting.
More to come, perhaps including testimony re his objection letter.

The derangement over Haberman comes from a few things, one of which is the need to fit the fact of Clinton's loss to the claim she was an excellent candidate done in by a media conspiracy, and one of which is the idea that the news should be reported as John Oliver does.

Putin and Trump must have broken up, and Trump's trying to make Putin jealous by cozying up to another murderous dictator, Kim-Jung un, bc that's what 12 year old middle schoolers do.

In that vein: 2018 had the highest turnout in a 100 years. I believe 2020 will see massive turnout. We have to assume Trump will bring out a lot of voters. We need to bring in new voters to 2020 as we did in 2018. Here's an article on what you can do:

On this Memorial Day, I'm grateful to all those who have served to keep the country - all of us - safe. I also believe that on Memorial Day we should honor them by ensuring that we end the endless wars and don't start pointless wars.

In that vein: 2018 had the highest turnout in a 100 years. I believe 2020 will see massive turnout. We have to assume Trump will bring out a lot of voters. We need to bring in new voters to 2020 as we did in 2018. Here's an article on what you can do:

While we agonize over Trump & watch every poll on the Dem pres primary, there's an important Governor's race happening now in Kentucky. Bevin, perhaps the worst gov in the country, is facing Dem @AndyBeshearKY, a strong candidate committed to health care.

Neera Tanden

Bevins just barely got over 50% of the vote in his GOP primary as an incumbent. In 2007, Andy's dad beat a Republican incumbent who got barely over 50%. Bevins has attacked the Medicaid expansion and Beshear is a champion of health care.

What is a fake video? Is it just Pelosi? Is it also the Onion? RT? Sputnik? April Fools jokes? Photoshopped or CGI enhanced content? Reductionism doesn't help here.

Slippery slope arguments don't help either. Platforms that tell us they value authenticity and take down fake accounts should not distribute fake videos, which can easily be defined: altered videos that are designed to communicate a falsehood. Like Pelosi is drunk or losing it.

The question before us actually is whether an impeachment inquiry will get more documents from the courts. Because Trump will try to stonewall an impeachment inquiry like a regular inquiry. Pelosi is arguing they will get them either way, as I understand it.

This isn't my area of legal practice, but it seems to me there's now a new, post-Mueller, potential basis for impeachment, which is happening out-in-the-open, party from Trump's stonewalling Congress, party from Trump's weaponizing the justice department against political enemies

This is nutty. Pure delusion. If Dems didn't want to have a confrontation over impeachment, they shouldn't have contested the 2018 election. Full stop. The president was a berserk criminal from the start. It wasn't a secret.

With all due respect, punting key determinations to Congress (with vulnerability to Bill Barr injecting his own spin) amid polarized political conditions fueled the political spectacle that Robert Mueller is now trying to avoid. He needs to testify, & he needs to do so publicly.

What's just shocking to me it's as if the Mueller report never happened. It is the most damning document ever written about a president. But the country isn't going to read a 448 page document. They have lives. They need political leaders to explain it. Dems aren't, Trump is.

My guess is that he's just a small c conservative that never wanted to say anything political or negative about Trump. That should color our reading of his report. It was done by an extremely cautious guy that still produced a report that was a huge indictment of Trump.

I understand Mueller's reluctance to testify publicly. Many expected him to be judge and jury, without understanding that his job was to investigate and to report his findings. Now he views his job as being complete, and he does not want to participate in the political spectacle

Ray D'Antuono @rpd158 · 23 May 2019

However, as @brianbeutler noted, the decision not to testify here is also a political decision. His job is not just to report to Congress but also the American people, most of whom will never read his report. He owes the American people his public testimony in his own voice.

With all due respect, punting key determinations to Congress (with vulnerability to Bill Barr injecting his own spin) amid polarized political conditions fueled the political spectacle that Robert Mueller is now trying to avoid. He needs to testify, & he needs to do so publicly.

Take @EricColumbus's point seriously. I think you're right, Neera, that Mueller should testify expansively, but Eric's probably right that he *would testify tersely, conservatively, and disappointingly. And that would be an additional damper on momentum.

With whipped butter or Earth Balance: leave it to melt at room temp for 30 min. Add honey and stir.

Put back in fridge. Orange blossom honey is the best for me.

Your gender has nothing to do with you falling for Pelosi's lines about impeachment. She has no interest in impeaching Trump. She's stymied every attempt.

So when she says he's committed "impeachable acts" and you says that's "powerful," it's delusional. It's meaningless.

I respect you @mepfuller and only wish you'd respect @magi_jay as much. Pelosi didn't need to say obstruction of the investigation is an impeachable offense. Yet she did. That's significant and perhaps the daily maelstrom is such that you're missing it.

I definitely came off strong, but I'm frustrated by this tactic working. It's misinformation.

Pelosi said it "could be impeachable." To me, that means you move forward with impeachment. That is absolutely not want Pelosi wants to do, as she made clear in that very presser.

This letter made my year.

It's not always easy to be in the arena. But it's important to remember that it's always part of the work to widen the path for others.

And I know one day Amelie will be running things. And we will be better for her leadership Thank you so much Amelie.

[redacted]

Ms. Neera Tanden
Center For American Progress
1333 H St NW
Washington, DC 20005

Dear Ms. Tanden:

My name is Amelie [redacted] I am a 14 year old girl in [redacted] California. I really appreciate what you've done for women's issues and I think you are a good role model for young women. It is good to see a woman in power in Washington so thank you.

As a young woman, I have noticed for a long time that girls like me were rarely in power. While boys my age could see themselves in presidents and politicians, I didn't. Seeing a woman as the president of an organization as politically influential as the Center for American Progress, is really inspirational. As a woman, I'm sure you have experienced sexism getting to where you are now and it shows me how I could get past those things and be important and influential too. It gives me hope for my future because you are helping to close the gender disparity in politically influential positions. Despite stereotypes and bias against women, you have been so successful and that really inspires me.

Thank you for continuing to succeed despite bias against you. It makes me think that I may one day be powerful and influential. I hope you continue to break down barriers. You are incredibly inspiring for young women, thank you.

Donald J. Trump @realDonaldTrump
In a letter to her House colleagues, Nancy Pelosi said: "President Trump had a temper tantrum for us all to see." This is not true. I was purposely very polite and calm, much as I was minutes later with the press in the Rose Garden. Can be easily proven. It is all such a lie!

I live in #GA06, which Lucy McBath won, and I can tell you there were Republicans who voted for her. A few of my Republican friends supported her over Karen Handel. I don't know why some people think bipartisanship is a dirty word – on both sides.

I hate the squabbling over the things that don't matter. At the end of the day, the Democratic Party is a big tent that welcomes all, not just ultra liberals. Bipartisanship and being a moderate are the new emails. Unbelievable.

The issue is also that Biden will just deepen the problems we need to address and will set the path for a Cotton presidency or worse.

BTW, Neera: You seem to be arguing, as many centrist White Democrats have, that Black people, Latinos, immigrants, and women should not be angry or dismissive of bipartisanship. That implicitly, their rights and freedoms are invalid, especially compared to White men.

Swing districts are not the whole of America. To treat all of America as a swing district is to pursue a campaign message that will demobilize key Democratic voting blocs. I really don't see the point of repeating all the folly that elected Trump.

Set aside whether that's true re climate and the courts for a moment. For now what ■ pretty clearly fueling Biden ■ belief he's most likely to beat Trump. Beating Trump is by definition a predicate for any positive change. So it makes sense to address that issue, no?

Americans are becoming more tolerant every day, which is why the Equality Act is so counterproductive. It unnecessarily pits communities against each other and divides our nation when patience and understanding are so sorely needed.

Is there a reason Barr hasn't been censured?

Aaron Rupar @atrupar
Wow. AG Bill Barr basically threatens Democrats during his Fox News interview, says of those criticizing him that "they may be concerned about the outcome of a review of what happened during the election."

This is a result of our country refusing to support parents. We are alone amongst industrialized world on lack of paid leave, we offer almost zero help with child care. Parents bear costs almost alone and a lot put it off or have fewer children.

Cersei was evil solely to win and keep power. Dany turned evil because she's stupid, entitled, and had an attitude. The worst. And that's why she won't be the last person on the throne. #GamesOfThrones Oversight is the most important thing to do with an Administration that behaves criminally. If it takes an impeachment inquiry to actually conduct oversight, so be it. The House can always decide on an impeachment vote down the road after they've heard evidence.

I saw focus groups of Trump voters in 2016. They thought the fact he was a hugely successful businessman would make him a successful president. The fact he was a loser in business will hurt him. And that is why he's kept his taxes secret.

They may choose to believe his lies now. But he kept this all secret for a reason.

Personally, I think "he's a good businessman" is just code.

I grew up in the Atlantic City area and have many family members who kept their boats at his marina. They knew how awfully he treated people there and how poorly he ran it and yet they still supported him over Hillary.

Becca Brubaker @itsmebeccam · 7 May 2019

HRC literally came to Atlantic City, stood in front of one of his condemned casinos, and told the stories of the people he screwed over. Her campaign highlighted the story of a business owner in South Jersey who Trump owes hundreds of thousands of dollars to.

It didn't matter.

Here's your fix, put it all in one bill.

"Post Trump Reforms"

-Abolish the Electoral College
-redistricting to be done by independent, non-partisan commissions.
-Required release of 10 yrs of tax returns for President, Vice President nominees
-Single 20 year term for Federal Judges, Supreme Court Judges
-Supreme Court vacancies occurring within 6 months of an election (presidential or otherwise) must be given a vote
-President is subject to same ethics rules as others in Executive branch (i.e. the President CAN have conflicts of interest and they should be disclosed and avoided)
-Prohibition of sons, daughters, close family, relatives in the administration
-all voting machines must produce an auditable, hard copy of each vote, i.e. hand marked ballots
-independent physician board to confidentially review all Presidential medical records, test reports and publicly issue a yes or no opinion on fitness.
-inauguration donations must ▪ be publicly disclosed, accounts independently audited.
-complete and verified divestiture for President, cabinet members, and senior advisors
-prohibition of nondisclosure/non disparagement agreements for campaigns, transitions, inaugurals and Executive Office paid and unpaid staff
-revoke Dept of Justice policy exempting President from indictment while in office

I agree -- Dem congressional candidates were also focused on college whites (men) who have been pretty Republican in the past, but were swing in 2018 and are swing now.

What's odd about Dem primary political discourse is that we had elections around the country in 2018 in which candidates ran on unifying the country; appealing to Dems/GOP/Indies; and won. And then immediately after the election, the media/pundits just ignored all of them.

> (((Harry Enten))) @ForecasterEnten
> This is from the midterms and current polling... You can quibble with the exact numbers (i.e. there are margins of error)... but it's all pretty clear. Dem voters are ollllld... and they sure as heck ain't very liberal.

The Barr DOJ will never charge a stonewalling Trump official with criminal contempt of Congress. But if the House gets a court order to enforce its subpoenas, the court can appoint its own independent prosecutor to charge criminal contempt of court.

I really feel like Dems are making the "impeachment question" complicated, when it's simple:

Democrats: Stop tearing each other apart over impeachment. That only helps #Trump. The path is clear: Keep impeachment on the table but first use hearings & further inquiries to make clear to the majority just how outrageous Trump's behavior is.

The only problem with this view is that leadership took it off the table and continues to have surrogates dismiss the idea. We need a clear message now that it is back on the table and the the hearings could lead there. It will hurt Dems to hold endless hearings with no purpose.

Yes, because it's called an "impeachment inquiry," which is the first step in the impeachment process: determine whether to proceed to a resolution by conducting a public inquiry.

The process is clear, and it serves no purpose to call it something else.

Here is a look ■ some of the most noteworthy sections from the exhaustive work by Mueller's team. bit.ly/2UFWEHA

Takeaways from the Mueller report

- There were no obstruction charges, in part because Trump's aides refused his orders.
- The investigation did not find evidence of a conspiracy between Trump's campaign and Russia, but the Trump campaign expected to "benefit" from Russian efforts.
- "This is the end of my presidency," Trump said, after Robert Mueller was tasked with overseeing the investigation.
- Mueller found Trump's written answers "inadequate" and considered whether to subpoena the president.
- Trump told Mueller that his "Russia, if you're listening" comment in July 2016 was a joke.
- The investigations aren't over; there are at least 25 other cases, 14 of which are secret.
- The investigation began on July 31, 2016, after "a foreign government contacted the FBI."
- No one, including the president, "is so high that he is above the law," the report said.

Manafort had Gates regularly send campaign data to Kilimnik (who the FBI says has links to Russian intelligence); he also met with Kilimnik twice in the US in 2016 and gave him campaign info. Mueller's office never figured out why the info was sent or what Followers who have been paying attention, know I have been questioning Rosenstein's patriotism vs his Party loyalty for some 10 months. He had 22 months. Why did he not get a new legal opinion on indictability of a sitting POTUS, instead of misapplying a 1973 one for Spiro Agnew?

Must we have a civil war because these two have decided that Trump IS above the law?

"Rampant talk of civil war..[has its] origins in real crumbling confidence in..democratic institutions & paralyzed federal government."
WaPo, 3/2/19

Misapplying a 1973 legal opinion directed solely at Spiro Agnew these two say Trump IS above the law *

After 22 months, why has a new legal opinion not been ordered applying to Trump, not Agnew (& by inference in passing, Nixon)?

After 22 months, shouldn't SCOTUS be reviewing this question now? IS Trump above the law?

A statement from my mother, Maya Tanden: As a 78-year-old immigrant, I am so proud of my daughter for succeeding - making life better for so many people and helping bring health care to millions. For the first time in my life, a reporter contacted me out of nowhere and said she wanted to talk to me for what I thought was a nice story about Neera. I didn't understand my words would be used in the story and once I understood they could be, I called her back to clarify that. Only then did she tell me my words were "on the record," a term I've never heard before. I feel very misled

Other countries have figured out healthcare- we can too. Sander's scorched earth approach is not what I believe Kamala is after. There are GIANT holes & problems w existing system. The unbridled profit mentality from insurance cos + pharma, for example. Medicaid not only answer.

Totally right.

Interesting new memo from @DataProgress, making an extensive case AGAINST Joe Biden's electability.

They tested numerous of his positions and found he loses support perilously among multiple key voter groups, potentially allowing Trump to beat him:

filesforprogress.org/misc/is-biden-…

Voters are clearly concerned when exposed to negative information about Joe Biden, a candidate who has not yet been exposed to the kind of relentless criticism a candidate in a general Presidential election will face. Troublingly, information about his past has the clearest and strongest effects among clear Democratic partisans and moderate and Independent voters, populations with whom the eventual nominee will need to perform strongly to be competitive in 2020. In our sample, that movement was enough to flip Biden from Biden narrowly defeating Trump to Trump safely beating Biden. The post-statement vote margin for Trump we observe in the two-party vote share in our survey, about 52-48, is about the share President Barack Obama earned in 2012 and is just one point less than what he earned in 2008.

An organization from the left dumping a bunch of negatives on Biden would have more credibility if they did the same to all candidates, including their favorites, and see how they all fare

FWIW on this race, Dem turnout was actually up over the last court race, in 2018. But Rs had a late buy that nationalized the race, invoking the Kavanaugh hearings. They woke up more voters. twitter.com/DavidNir/statu…

Doesn't it also expose that for the media RL is defined from a white Midwestern point of view. Completely foreign to me but sends a message that to be acceptable, mainstream, I have to conform to that RL. POC aren't allowed to place their own RL on the same level.

Before this conventional wisdom sets, let me say that taking a clip from the hottest point in the primary and acting like that's the whole primary is wrong. I was part of both 08 and 16. It's my strong view 2016 was a lot harsher than 2008. But we should all move past 2016.

But this just doesn't make sense. Clinton & Obama did regular political battle every week, sometimes daily, for 4 months. Clinton & Sanders campaigned for that long, but did not attack/respond in the same highly critical ways. It was worse HERE, on twitter, but not on the trail.

Andrew Long @andrewlong166 · 7 Apr 2019

Plus, most of the critical daily drip about Clinton was from the press, not Sanders. That [illegible] a material difference that did increase the attack/harshness quotient of 2016.

Pairing cantaloupe with honeydew, just because they're both melons, reduces honeydew to a disappointing sidekick. Like raisins in trail mix, where they feel like a bust — while raisins alone feel like a healthy, if modest, snack.

Yes, I know ppl who depend on Medicare that support him even though he wants to cut their services; what's worse, is some don't even realize he's doing it! They just believe the latest Fox News headline & worry about what they're told to worry about!

He was good, when he could work in a word edgewise or not be interrupted eleventy million times by Chris Matthews. Personable, great sense of humor, willing to throw some shade at AOC about the Amazon deal and threw a little at Harris and Sanders for admitting to smoking pot.

I despise Trump. But crapping all over the rule & impartiality of law is not resisting populist mayhem, but emulating and abetting it.
I mean, you realize states controlled by single parties, or even just sufficient majorities, could tailor such measures to ANY candidate, right?!

In times of crisis (or lesser states of strife & contention) one can argue that it's all the more important to uphold principles and traditions of probity, rectitude and good faith.
Or one can say, "let's us just fight dirtier than them."
THIS is the actual "binary choice."

There are many horrible lows of the Trump Admin but one definite low is that in the face of global white nationalist terrorism, we have a president who instead of combatting it, fans its flames. Making a lot of people a lot less safe. Feels like we are in the upside down.

Not sure what the niche candidates mean, but otherwise

Larry Sabato @LarrySabato
Trump's main ally (ironically) for the duration of the D contest is the news media. They are nitpicking D front runners to death while elevating niche candidates— before eventually tearing them down too. Not to worry: After the '20 election they'll have lots of apology seminars.

CITY OF SOUTH BEND
MAYOR PETE BUTTIGIEG
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

March 15, 2019

Dear members of the Islamic Society of Michiana:

Good evening and peace be with you

I am sorry that I cannot join you in person tonight, because I am traveling. But like you, I was shocked by this morning's news of events in New Zealand. I know that this act of terror was intended to put fear in our hearts, and that the fear was designed to travel around the world. We are a long way from the place where this happened, but I know that on this Jummah Friday, many in our own community, especially people of Muslim faith, are wondering if they are safe or even if they belong.

As you gather this evening, I write to tell you that this City is absolutely committed to your safety and well-being. I want you to know that this entire City has its arms around you, in love and peace, and that we support you as you practice your faith here in this community, our community, this home we share. We will do everything we can to ensure your safety as we do that of everyone who lives here and who visits here.

The diversity of our community is its strength, and the members of the Islamic community have greatly enriched this City, in your worship, in your service, even by the diversity of nationalities among your number. We would be poorer without you.

And I write not only to console you and to reassure you, but to ask something of you. I wish to tell you not only that you are loved but also that you are needed. This City very much needs you at a time like

With all due respect, the folks who "could have said" those things about Obama in 2007 would have been making arguments in bad faith. Voorhees isn't doing that here. Obama had two books, a legislative record, and a clear campaign message that defined him. Different case entirely.

Dems have very easily held Pennsylvania's #HD114 (Lackawanna County). On paper this should have the most competitive of the night's special election since it swung from Obama in 2012 to Trump (+7%) in 2016. But Bridget Kosierowski (D) won 62% to 38%, a big swing.

Schultz's problems are epitomized when he talks health care. "The insurance industry is not playing fair with the American people... the people who are making these rules up are taking money from the insurance companies." That's the Sanders position, which he claims is socialism.

Exactly. I think intrinsic perceptions shape that. I also think media shape that. And importantly, I think there's a CW perspective that centrism = electability. It's that last one that concerns me.

Let's stop using "centrism" - used by the pro-Bernie crowd to insult and demean moderate Dems - to describe the 2020 candidates. The irony of it is that Bernie himself has taken many positions and votes that are deeply offensive to people on the left, as opposed to his cultists.

What so many critics of Democrats don't seem to understand: it's not the IDEAS, it's the EXECUTION. I have no problem with the Green New Deal, or Universal health care. That's how it should be. But these things cannot simply be imposed by fiat. Progressives do not have the power.

This was also striking at CPAC. Lots of table-thumping about how Democrats were trying to overturn "the election." IE, Dems who won in a 2018 backlash to Trump are illegitimate if they oppose the guy who won in 2016.

There's a difference between a primary and general. Obama in 2008 won Idaho in the primary by a lot. He lost it in the general. By a lot. I suggest moving out of the echo chamber for facts.

2018 Governor and Senate races in navy blue MD are great examples. Jealous ran on a Bernie endorsed platform and lost by 13%. Cardin ran a moderate campaign, as usual, and beat Chelsea Manning by 75% in the primary and his GOP opponent by 34% in the general. Real life data/facts.

Whilst diversity (of ideas) is healthy, the party has to manage its big tent carefully because that's how divisions originate. For all we don't like about Republicans, they know how make their own fall in line.

Meghan McCain @MeghanMcCain

I'm pro-life, and not in the talking point of "not for me but okay for other people" sense. I stand by what I said this morning, if the Democratic Party wants to be the party of late term abortion and infanticide, they won't just lose - history will judge them for what they did.

Let's get down to the basics ... Abortion and infanticide are two entirely different things.

in·fan·ti·cide

noun

1. the crime of killing a child within a year of birth.

Some of these are pretty close. But if Texas is close in 2020, hard to see how Trump wins re-election. Terrible for him to even have to compete there. #eyesontheprizepeople

What's factually wrong? Read . HRC did NOT say what you claim. Rather, she said that Bernie Sanders "had a long history of being very favorable toward Russia"--a lie & a smear--& that Putin also favored Trump, because he "would be ALSO incredibly favorable".
#StopGaslighting

"I think he [Putin] saw me as a worthy adversary, which I think I was, and he clearly favored in the campaign, first in the primary, Bernie Sanders, who had a long history of being very favorable toward Russia, and then he favored Trump, who he had reason to believe would be also incredibly favorable."

I put out a question to Bernie supporters about whether they were watching Cohen and their thoughts. As you know Bernie's animus toward Trump is famous so this is an answer I didn't expect: "What does it matter? Trump or centrist dem do nothing to help me."

What? Michael Cohen says he thinks special counsel or other government agencies are able to confirm Roger Stone gave heads up on Wikileaks to Trump. That would be a BFD

One would hope Assange's conversations were being scrutinized.

What's factually wrong? Read . HRC did NOT say what you claim. Rather, she said that Bernie Sanders "had a long history of being very favorable toward Russia"–a lie & a smear–& that Putin also favored Trump, because he "would be ALSO incredibly favorable".
#StopGasfighting

"I think he [Putin] saw me as a worthy adversary, which I think I was, and he clearly favored in the campaign, first in the primary, Bernie Sanders, who had a long history of being very favorable toward Russia, and then he favored Trump, who he had reason to believe

Warren is so smart, tho. She obviously doesn't attract donors, so what can she do? Claim that she won't spend time with them. The feedback she'll get today from "realists" will only help her among "idealists", and put significant pressure on other candidates.

This guy literally just asked about Gavin Newsom being in the room at a Republican Gov event. And he's attacking a great American for using notes.

Donald J. Trump @realDonaldTrump
Be nice if Spike Lee could read his notes, or better yet not have to use notes at all, when doing his racist hit on your President, who has done more for African Americans (Criminal Justice Reform, Lowest Unemployment numbers in History, Tax Cuts,etc.) than almost any other Pres!

No, I don't. And Feinstein may be a little conservative, but her environmental voting record is good. It is certain that until Democrats obtain at least a majority in the Senate, the GND in any form will not pass. Maybe spend time on Sen. Inhofe instead, and on denier fallacies.

Individual ambition to rise in progressive politics ■ preventing coalition building.

And I'm an Obama fan, but he had a hard time transferring juice down ballot in 2010, 2012 and 2014. We are going to need a captivating platform and politicians who are all in to hopefully get even bigger numbers than he did. Trump is a great opportunity for a landslide victory.

I don't know. I thought Obama was pretty inspiring; he won a landslide victory in 2008, won re-election. I'd imagine he thinks the tea party tactics are anathema to actually trying to make real, positive change in people's lives. Tea Party gave rise to Trump. Inspiring? Nope

And I'm an Obama fan, but he had a hard time transferring juice down ballot in 2010, 2012 and 2014. We are going to need a captivating platform and politicians who are all in to hopefully get even bigger numbers than he did. Trump is a great opportunity for a landslide victory.

He absolutely is. So you want a ticket that gets a landslide victory. That is both exciting to the base and represents a big tent. That is the best way to sweep in a Dem senate. And to make real change.

But I'm also extremely liberal and like us all see things through the prism of my ideology. In the end what I think is you push hard for what you believe in and want during the primaries and then coalesce around who the party picks because the GOP is a humanitarian crisis.

One thing I don't get about some of the liberal base ■ the constant instinct to go super soft on Democrats. The Tea Party challenged Republicans. The GOP then dominated for most of 6 years, obstructed Obama, elected Trump, got 2 SCOTUS judges. Evidence shows we should push hard.

The tea party wants the government to fail. They like a Congress that grounds to a halt. They don't build coalitions, they tear people down. The inverse of the tea party is not what you think.

THIS is why we need equal representation & have every right to fight for it- a truth Bernie Sanders tries to brush away w lies (we're not voting for Palin). Equal representation ■ power- to make rapid change, enact laws in our favor, pass the ERA. Giving WM control harms us.

There is a major ideological divide in the Democratic Party and complaints about Clinton and the DNC long preceded the DNC emails, which had a pretty late release date. Casting tensions as a product of Russia/Wikileaks is just not correct.

Of course you know Russia helped Bernie in 2016...right?
politico.com/story/2018/02/...

The indictment revealed that the efforts included "operations primarily intended to communicate derogatory information about Hillary Clinton, to denigrate other candidates such as Ted Cruz and Marco Rubio, and to support Bernie Sanders and then-candidate Donald Trump."

Russian "specialists were instructed to post content that focused on 'politics in the USA' and to 'use any opportunity to criticize Hillary and the rest (except Sanders and Trump—we support them.),'" the indictment continued. It said that message was sent around Feb. 10, 2016, the day after both Sanders and Trump won their respective parties' all-important New Hampshire primary contest.

Really important point.

Steadman™ @AsteadWesley
Why? Dems are increasingly protective of candidates coming out of a 2016 election where they felt HRC was wronged, they see the "Native" line of attack as bolstering Trump, AND many Dems themselves share same misunderstandings of Native identity/history

Congratulations for not merely preferring the candidate who appointed Abrams and Bolton but advancing the narrative that he was the anti-neocon peace candidate both before and after the election

Glenn Greenwald @ggreenwald

Congratulations once again to the #Resistance for spending two years rehabilitating, revering, and building the platform of people like Bill Kristol, Max Boot and this person so that they can use their new influence to spread messaging like praise for Elliott Abrams and this:

Labour has been one of the great parties in history. The fact that MP's are leaving it over its waffling on Brexit and anti-Semitism is incredibly sad. Leaders should not blame those that leave but look at what they did to make them do so.

Actually, I'd argue we had that debate & the right lost. By 1986, Reagan's Central America policy was so unpopular his government had to sell arms to Iran to finance the contras. And Reagan had to talk nice to Gorbachev to please the public.

I don't think we've had a debate informed by the subsequent 30 years. Sandinistas turned out to be about as bad as their opponents. Latin America is bad where US intervened and bad where it didn't. Who's really trying to learn lessons, not just reiterate their positions from 80s?

But we've certainly not had much of a debate in this country about whether either the Cold War in general, or specific actions (e.g., in Iran, Chile, Nicaragua, etc., etc.) were good or bad, using what we know with hindsight.

The double standard the NYT uses for Trump, who lies repeatedly, and Dems, who are in fact not lying, is quite stunning. I guess if you're a lying potus, the NYT has a lot of reasons to give you every benefit of the doubt. If you're a Dem, they freely use the word lying

At my high school - in the 70s - the League of Women Voters would come once or twice a year & register everyone in the senior class who wanted to & would be 18 by Election Day. MANY kids in my class registered.

It was exciting - a rite of passage.

ICE isnt following our laws to consider asylum, a very valid claim in most cases. Who ever would have thought we'd devolved to the point where Don Jr calls Native Americans "savages".

Many asylum seekers have been coached to say that, when they're really coming here for jobs. Walls do work. In the places along the border where there are walls, or barriers, illegal immigration, drug smuggling, human traffickers have gone down 90% or more.

Regardless of any particular #Resister's personal prefs, we all need to share the goal of getting the Dem. nominee elected #POTUS46.

The only way to do that is by promoting good ideas, not tearing down candidates w/ bad ideas, so that the end result is a strong nominee.

We were on food stamps and subsidized housing in my childhood (single mom/2 kids). Mom trained as a secretary, got off assistance, worked hard. My sister and I both went on to college, career, and family success. Give people a fighting chance and they will do amazing things!

People who think it will be easy to beat Trump are wrong. It's not going to be impossible. But now he's president. And a lot of people are vested in his success. We are all going to have to work hard to defeat him. twitter.com/EWErickson/sta…

I never factored the Ericksons of the world in how the Dems reach an EC majority. What changed in 16 and grew in 2018 is suburban rejection of Trumpism among white college voters. Trump has also lost a lot of non-college whites. If Dems get a good nominee, Trump will lose.

elle oeh @ElleOeh · 12 Feb 2019

It's not that simple. This is bigger than Trump. Always has been. Trump is just a symptom of a much bigger problem in our country. Focusing only on Trump would be a BIG mistake.

No, criticism of Israel isn't anti-semitism, just like criticism of a Muslim majority state isn't islamophobia, by default. However racist or bigoted tropes can be intentionally or unintentionally triggered in making those critiques and yes that matters-it always matters.

I will be 100% supportive of the Democratic nominee. But there's no "outside politics." Every American is inside politics if politics is about all of us. A political establishment claiming that lane for themselves, turning average citizens into spectators, is exactly the problem.

I think it's brilliant that so many women are running. In 2016, some folks in the media had zeroed in against HRC thanks to sexism and misogyny.

But with more amazing women candidates, it's hard for the same folks in the media to focus on any one candidate.

"But her DNA"

It's always some slander over something which would be ignored in a male candidate. It's so frustrating that the media has learned nothing from their journalistic malpractice in 2016.

I'd like to go to sleep but a person who believes in man made climate change is not a denier. A person unwilling to do anything about it is a person who is unwilling to do anything about it. You could say they deny the need for action on climate if you want. Have a great night.

Also describing robust, principled opposition to the Speaker of the House's policy of climate inaction as a type of interpersonal psychological abuse is a great way to totally elide the significant power Pelosi has to take necessary action, so well done there

This statement from @SteveScalise is simply true. The biggest mass shootings of the past few years were carried out with weapons legally purchased by gunmen who passed background checks. Democrats owe their critics a response.

> The new gun control restrictions currently being considered by the Democratic majority in H.R. 8 would not have prevented my shooting.
> In fact, these new gun control measures being proposed in H.R. 8 would not have prevented any number of recent mass violence events. Several perpetrators of recent multi-victim shootings also purchased their guns legally. In some instances, the background check system failed, and lack of intervention from law enforcement failed to intercept potential threats.
> I want to stress that the man who shot me was issued a permit [illegible] purchase firearms by the state of Illinois, and had acquired them legally. At Virginia Tech, Charleston, and Sutherland Springs failures in the background check system allowed individuals to illegally obtain the firearms they used to commit their crimes. The alleged loopholes that H.R. 8 claims to fix would not have prevented these tragedies either.

It appears the rich or highly paid pundits getting coverage from their corporate jobs have never had to deal with insurance companies. Even with the ACA once you change jobs or start a business, work several noncorporate jobs or are unemployed there goes your life.

1. That's 50%+ of all people for whom it's an option (not even theirs but their employers'.)

Medicare Supplement plans and Medicare Advantage plans have some distinct differences (I used to train health insurance agents on Med Adv plans). Both are excellent, and there are zero copay MA plans.

MExtra does a lot of little things which amount to less than the sum of their parts. It leaves our infrastructure cracked, and while its goal to plug existing gaps is neat, it neglects to consider that the sprawl of US insurance is itself driving the problems you fail to fix kill tim faust @crulge · 4 Feb 2019

It fundamentally attempts the ACA again, but a little bigger. It doesn't address underlying issues of American healthcare; it neither removes the fissures created by a system of separate and self-interested payors nor helps the people trapped win them.

Lord. It's Medicare for everyone except those who want to keep their plans. If employees want Medicare they get it. If they want their current plan they keep it. If you think everyone wants Medicare they will all choose it. What are you afraid of?

Cenk Uygur @cenkuygur
#MedicareforAll does not have copays & that's what I'm comparing your plan to. By doing "Medicare for Some" you are clearly not covering everyone & leaving current system intact. It's incremental change & very misleading to use Medicare for All language. You might want to revise. twitter.com/neeratanden/st...

I don't know why @cenkuygur is spreading misinformation about a plan. I assume it's because he hasn't read it and he's not deliberately lying. Our plan is universal. It is not a buy in. And just FYI, Medicare today has co-pays. Happy to chat health care any time Cenk

> What it doesn't do is get within miles of universal health care. Private insurers would still be in charge, you'd still have co-pays & deductibles, people who are excluded and almost all of the problems we have now. i think it's very easy for men to believe that medicare will cover everything, because for them it will.

But a lot of women's healthcare needs (fertility, abortion) will be the first thing that are given up in compromise.

This single-payer or die is a symptom of male privilege.

Monjula Ray @queerBengali · 4 Feb 2019

Also, as someone pointed out to me, a lot of trans medical care will also be on the chopping block.

People are naive if they think that cis gender men and the rest of us will benefit equally from single payer.

There's a big difference between:

- A single-payer Medicare For All system like the higher quality, more efficient, and less expensive systems nearly every advanced economy provides, vs:

Actually not just wealthy. Many union households like ours (a teacher) have great insurance, mostly paid by employer. I support change. But we'd better start speaking straight to people, explain the costs and benefits in real terms, or people'll be surprised, support will plummet

The Democratic Party establishment will keep muddying the waters by saying: "We all agree on the goal of universal health care, but we have different means to get there."

But there's a substantive and values-based debate here: is health care is a right or a privilege?

Neera Tanden @neeratanden

Indeed, CAP's Medicare Extra for All plan does exactly that: americanprogress.org/issues/healthc…. Would have been great for the authors to mention this proposal, but c'est la vie. But it's a false choice to say that there's only one way to universal health care and it's single payer.

Show this thread

Neera Tanden
@neeratanden

Replying to @_waleedshahid

That is precisely the false choice. I believe health care is a right. Everyone in Medicare Extra has health care. Everyone. We just don't eliminate the choice of insurance for employees that like their current health care. But if they want Medicare, they can have it.

Public option proposals run the risk of creating a two tiered system where the rich opt out and leave the PO as a dumping ground for the sick and poor. This could lead to providers opting out of accepting the PO.

It is easy to afford good health insurance when you solicit donations from wealthy despots. The average American does not have access to this kind of cash flow. We get stuck with the non-despot funded plans which have an 8k deductible.

Can we also just focus on the fact that the GOP's position in 2020 is no ACA, no medicaid, and to raid medicare as a piggy bank for tax cuts? Our job is to defend the ACA and expand it by expanding Medicare/Medicaid accessibility. The alternative is a tragedy.

Indeed, CAP's Medicare Extra for All plan does exactly that: americanprogress.org/issues/healthc…. Would have been great for the authors to mention this proposal, but c'est la vie. But it's a false choice to say that there's only one way to universal health care and it's single payer.

This is silly. I'm liberal and welcome a big field of people running in the Democratic Party. And there were plenty of moderates who attacked Schultz including Third Way.

Edward-Isaac Dovere @IsaacDovere
Axios claims "Michael Bloomberg and former Virginia Gov. Terry McAuliffe, each of whom were virtual locks to runs" - neither of which is actually the case, regardless of the leftward "lurch" that the piece attributes this to axios.com/2020-president...

Isn't some of the negative sentiment about the choice to run third party? If you want to run - run as a D or R and go through a primary! We cannot risk splitting sane people who want Trump out.

I also think Schultz would get fewer attacks if he instead announced he was seeking the Democratic nomination. Fine, run and see if you can win. A lot less threatening than a vanity independent run that could possibly swing a close race to Trump.

Armando @ArmandoNDK · 2 Feb 2019

It's always amusing to me that people demanding "free speech " are usually complaining about someone else's free speech. Criticizing Schultz is an exercise of free speech and no one can stop Schultz from speaking or running. Especially given his billions.

Speaking to the Hive, an advisor to Schultz disputed the Fox Business story. "Nothing is true of [Schultz] reconsidering anything at all," the adviser said. "He is resolute in his plan to travel the country to meet with Americans outside of the political and media class to see if there's a movement for an independent candidacy . . . Everybody expected blowback. He was absolutely prepared for that. It was the vitriol that was the surprising thing, this idea that there shouldn't be free speech. It's a free country."

Hate is a self-destructive obsession that spirals out of control. If you hate, it only makes you hate more. You start having thoughts that disgust you.

Learning not to hate isn't just good for those around you. It helps you be a person you can stand to look at in the mirror.

Ranked Choice voting solves the third-party 'problem.' You get an A choice, B choice, ect. If your most wanted pick doesn't meet [illegible] threshold, your second pick is used.

Dems & Repubs have had decades to enact this, but don't in order to keep third-party weak & to bully voters.

Are polls saying only 20% of the British public thinks Corbyn would make a good prime minister wrong? Has that changed? Meanwhile here, Pelosi has higher ratings than Trump and every Dem pres candidate would beat Trump. And of course Dems won the House with large numbers.

Polls definitely change so perhaps they have from a few weeks ago. But even you can understand how people expect Labour to being doing better against the Tories in the disaster of Brexit

Well here is a complication you do not have to deal with, which is that 52% voted for Leave in a referendum, a result which intensely divides communities. It's Brexit that gives the Tories an artificially high electoral floor because Leave voters trust them most to deliver Brexit
17 10 720

Charlie Kennaugh #FBPE @c_kennaugh · 31 Jan 2019
And polls show that the Labour vote will collapse if they are seen to be enabling Tory Brexit. I know loads of Labour members and voters in the PV movement. Almost none of them intend to vote Labour next time if Corbyn doesn't support PV.

Many of them have cosponsored multiple versions and talk about multiple pathways. An easy way to deal with the public confusion - bc the public thinks Medicare for all does not mean ending employer based coverage - is to call it single payer. Which actually distinguishes it.

We're divided bc people like Steve betray our trust of the other side. We may not agree on issues, but we believed he cared about country. We are telling him we are terrified & this is how he responded. It's like a punch to the gut & tells me I was right in not trusting them.

I wonder if Schultz, whose political views seem to stem from egoism more than any deeply-held beliefs about government or public policy, will begin to also adopt more conservative views on social issues now that liberals are being mean to him.

By the way, @DrJillStein was the only candidate in 2016 who advocated to #CancelStudentDebt for 44 million Americans through quantitative easing. I hope the neolibs start parroting that soon, too!

Vote Tulsi Gabbard! @fernandez2126 · 29 Jan 2019

Yup, politicians with close ties to wall street, big pharma, and fossil fuel companies get less support from them. They haven't gone after @TulsiGabbard nor @VoteOjeda2020 , and barely touch @SenWarren .

Ummm. Ojeda dropped out. So maybe that's one reason. And by not critiquing Gabbard, who has a number of conservative votes and views, they're showing their colors

I've literally seen Gabbard criticized the most.
And if they're not, it's probably because she's not seen as a contender.

They went after Beto. Now it's Kamala. Before it was Cory. And some go after Warren. Do you detect the pattern?

What would be really great is if supporters of a candidate could talk about how great their candidate is instead of attacking and belittling literally every Democrat who starts getting attention.

We should all support our favorite candidates during the primaries, but not supporting whoever gets the nomination would be the ultimate sign of privilege. Trump is a serious threat to many vulnerable communities. Pretty much any Democrat is an improvement.

We said all this last time, but the losing candidate had offshore assistance in refusing to concede, demonizing the winner and promoting ■ rigged election narrative, using evidence from stolen private communication, amplified by thousands of automated bots. That part.

bloomberg is a racist, and the pete tape is real @james... · 29 Jan 2019

The primary was rigged. Even Donna Brazile admitted it. Emails proved it.

Thing Is, that only further hurt a candidate who was extremely disliked for decades at that point.

Anyhow, this is 2019. Now it's time to scrutinize the new candidates... as everyone should.

I sometimes wonder if a single member of Clinton Inc. has ever entertained a reason for losing 2016 that does involve Russia, racism, sexism, or the media. Perhaps half of the country was tired of elitist politicos calling them stupid. Not their ideas, but them, personally.
